A most glorious Thursday Evening with a pinch of weatherman lies and sprinkles of poorly timed wind and precipitation. I haven't been that moist before a calorie burn since my last Tinder date. This is the kind of weather that brings out the true hash troopers; 8 total I believe. I was unanimously voted to scribe and through poor memory, alcoholism, and pure laziness no names will be noted as I simply just don't know them. No virgins or visitors this evening so after a quick sprinkle of some beautiful orange powder we were sent off to splash in the puddles.

I figured if I maintained FRB I wouldn't have to submit anything to memory. How quickly I was wrong. With great power came great responsibility. Unfortunately, that responsibility was finding my way to many of the False trails our lovely Hares had left for us. “Wrong Way Willy” was quickly coined. About 15 minutes into the run the sky drippings subsided and ending up creating some perfect hashing weather.

A few more false trails, a checkback, and a couple welcomed arrows later we arrived at our forestry portion of the run. But wait! A Wild Vagina has appeared; Right on the run path; don't look directly at it! Avoid eye contact!

After it made its own puddle, and we all got a small run break, it continued along and we were cleared to make our way.

A quick jaunt through the woods, and park, and alleys of Kentwood and it all came to fruition. Beer Was Near. A low and behold...my favorite drinking location, the Church. Blueberries for after run snack? So fucking fancy!

We were a bit worried that the rain was going to wash away the trail markings but apparently it was just the Kentwood dope smokers kicking out the dots. The gals were resetting trail before we had come through and were rewarded with a small bag of sticky icky. Score! Didn't even share though...so selfish. A brief discussion about “Wrong Way Willy” being “Too Easy” of a name revealed that “Too Easy” is never a bad thing. And then I think they said they were just going to call me “Cunt” for a while. I've been called worse ladies. A few more blueberries and reminiscing and we made way back to the schoolyard for circle up. A few stragglers joined and boy, were we in luck; there was actually a circle drawn out for us on the ground. Needless to say, it was the most perfect circle a circle up did circle.

A variety of punishments were laid out; ranging from peeing on the trail, not putting in enough effort, to even promoting competition in a weird “who can push who with their ass better” dance. We have realized we need a secondary oversized sleeve for the larger armed folk. I did feel something move in my pants the way you handled that penis cup though.

A dreary start turned into a most spectacular run. Well done crew. JD's welcomed us with amazing food specials and cold beverages. The mini yorkies were gang busters and they can certainly cook a mean hamburger. $10.00 for a Burger and Beer? Can't go wrong with that. Not sure I've been in there where I didn't have to meet a drug dealer, so that was a nice change. It was just for drinks guys, drugs are illegal, mmm'kay.

Until next time.

On fucking on.
