Hare: Broken Boner

Location: Hidden Valley Ranch

Scribe: DKD

I know most people were planning on being busy when Boner volunteered to set the run as they were all saying to themselves - “ oh NO NO another fucking Boner Run!”. But the hare is a little wily and had an evil plan. He says the weather is going to be great lets meet at my house, we can have a nice fire and hamburgers and it will be out of town which is nice and relaxing.....

So the masses arrive taken in by his innocence (ha) and what do you know it is serene and beautiful out and who knew that he sports a pickleball court for diversion from the evil that lurks in the near future. Our RA was not watching the clock as he attempted to learn how to play with his balls in front of everyone so we slowly circled up. It was a robust crowd of Slippery, DKD, TNT, Curb, Pucker, GSpot, Premie, and Boner. Circle up begins with introductions and then our Hare throws some flour down in random order - good luck out there runners!

Off the runners went sprinting in confidence - because the level of trust is frightening, and just when they feel that they have it figured out what do they find X and back they come in sight of the walkers who are enjoying the show of frustration and looks of total betrayal on their faces as they now search and search for a new trail to take them on their adventure. Eventually they find some hints of a trail heading West, what do you know it is nice and flat and a well-marked trail so they can make up time. Onward they head and into some nice trees that create a natural archway - Oh what a beautiful run, we are so lucky to be out in the country - what a treat! Until..... They are lead to the old abandoned house site and told the story of how the house that use to stand there was abandoned when the family who last left there had the table set and Christmas presents waiting for their return.....but they never returned! The runners now looked at the Hare and noticed a little bit of a demonic look, so being smart they scream and start running back the way they came.

It wasn't long however that they once again felt the joy and peace of being on a nice country run because what do they see but some sweet little foxes, some deer, and 3 moose. Being of sound mind when they saw the moose they veered off the trail to the main road and felt that they were in total control now. How nice to be able to run around and see the nice acreages and be on trail, until what do you think they found, Yup a checkback.

Being good sports and remembering the strange look the Hare gave them at the house site they decided to swallow their comments because they really just wanted to make it back to their cars safely, after all this hare has claimed to be an avid hunter and flashes of “ Deliverance” were passing in their minds. So onward they push and are lead down down down into the trees and the river. It is a beautiful trail, they get to the river and are allowed a couple of minutes to take in the beauty, which does the trick as now they again are praising the hare on the wonderful location and beautiful scenery.....

So the Hare says follow trail we are almost at the beer (with an evil smirk) so the innocent Hashers do as they are told - because after all it is all about the beer - and up up up uuuuupppp uuuuuuuppppppp they travel feeling the burn and betrayal deep in their soul. Finally they reach level ground and once again see the home fire burning in the fire pit.

The walkers had the privilege of having the joy of a lovely trail that was through the trees and along the river with a nice gradual incline back up to the lovely fire that Premie kept lit as he expected some to be lost in the dark and wanted to make sure we could find our way back.

In the end all those who ventured out did return to the fire, trails were compared and comments such as “that was a ball busting run” could be heard. And comments about how 5km of the 6km run were false trails.

So if you weren't there just know that it can best be described as “another fucking Boner run!”
